

ASSYRIA FOUNDATION

Are you getting ready to go to college soon? Are you in college now?

Do you find yourself having lots of questions about which classes are best to take, where you can get more financial aid, which school to go to, what on earth you want to major in?

Do your parents have any idea how to fill out a FAFSA?

For first generation Assyrian-American students, college can be an overwhelming experience, as we go through the university process in the United States without family experience to help us.

The Assyria Foundation has volunteer mentors from around the country, all Assyrian, and all who have graduated from American Universities, from many different academic backgrounds, from Biochemistry to Labor Union Studies, From Stanford University to Northeastern University in Boston, we have a mentor that can help you answer your questions.

Why is mentoring Assyrian youth so important? We can help with:

- Advice on schools
- Advice on majors/minors
- Experience in the right internships or jobs
- Financial Aid
- Class selection
- Extracurricular activities
- Deciding on the best academic path
- Knowing how to use the college experience to become successfully employed after graduation

If you are an Assyrian student between the ages of 17-24, and are still attending an Undergraduate Institution or will be attending this Fall of 2007, please email info@assyriafoundation.org.

For more information about our mentoring project, including the mentors and their areas of expertise/academic institutions, please visit http://assyriafoundation.org/what we.php